Ever since you returned from England with the story of having seen a painting of me hanging on the walls of Alnwick Castle, I get periodical prods, likely from to old Scandinavian Goods, about the true connection between the Canadian Percies & the Percies of Northumberland. If there is a connection, it would be a pleasure and a satisfaction in knowing how.

You must recall the story of James Percy, the Trunkmaker of Dublin who claimed the Earldom of Northumberland, and whose claims were in error, because of his lack of proof.

Whether there is any truth in the matter is open to all sorts of answers. However, Grant Percy & his two sons, are the only male representatives of Joseph Batt Percy, a grandson of the loyalist, John Percy born in Dublin. This same John Percy might well be a descendant of the Trunkmaker. If so Grant would be entitled to use the coat of arms, with a proper emblem to note a fourth son. It would be of only academic interest to me as I am a Buleigh.

Dear Herbert:

I was very happy to hear from. I had asked Ila if you were still around and she said yes and that you had sent her some of the family history to read but didn't say anything about you having written a book. So I was quite surprised to hear it from you.

I have discussed this with my sons and they are very interested. They would like to know if you had the book registered with the Congressional Library in Washington, D.C. and if so what the registration number is. Had I known you had written a book I would certainly have ordered some from you. Are there any more available? If so, We could use eight or more, especially if you do not get to rewrite it. What are the costs of publishing and the cost of the books you had? We are all very interested but there aren't many more than our own family left out here. All of Uncle Will's family have passed away and we have lost track of the few grandchildren he had except the adopted son of James Percy. In the meantime I will try a little harder to find some of them. Also I will write to Hazel Romahn who is the daughter of Florence Moir who was the daughter of my Dad's oldest sister, Lovina Walker. She also has a younger brother who lives in Duluth, Minn. who may be interested. So I will do my best to see what can be done.

During the later part of 1973 I had cataracts removed from both my eyes and it has slowed me down quite a bit. However, my health is good so I recovered very well. My brother and my sister and myself are all in our 70's now. We are younger than most of our cousins as far as my Dad's nieces and nephews. Dad being the youngest in his family was one of the extra children his grandparents raised. He was almost forty when was married so he was late with his family. My Aunt Lovina's youngest daughter is still alive and will be 91 the first of April and lives in Roanoke, Va. She is the only cousin we have left other than Ila and her brothers and a sister. They are the children of my father's half brother Michael.

We all enjoy good health and keep going. My own family is growing all the time. We raised two sons and between them they gave us Eight Grandchildren. Now those grandchildren have given us Seven greatgrandchildren with another one who should have arrived Jan. 3rd but we are still waiting and another one will be here early June.

Well, I must write a few more letters so I can keep my New Years resolution to get my correspondence caught before the end of the month.

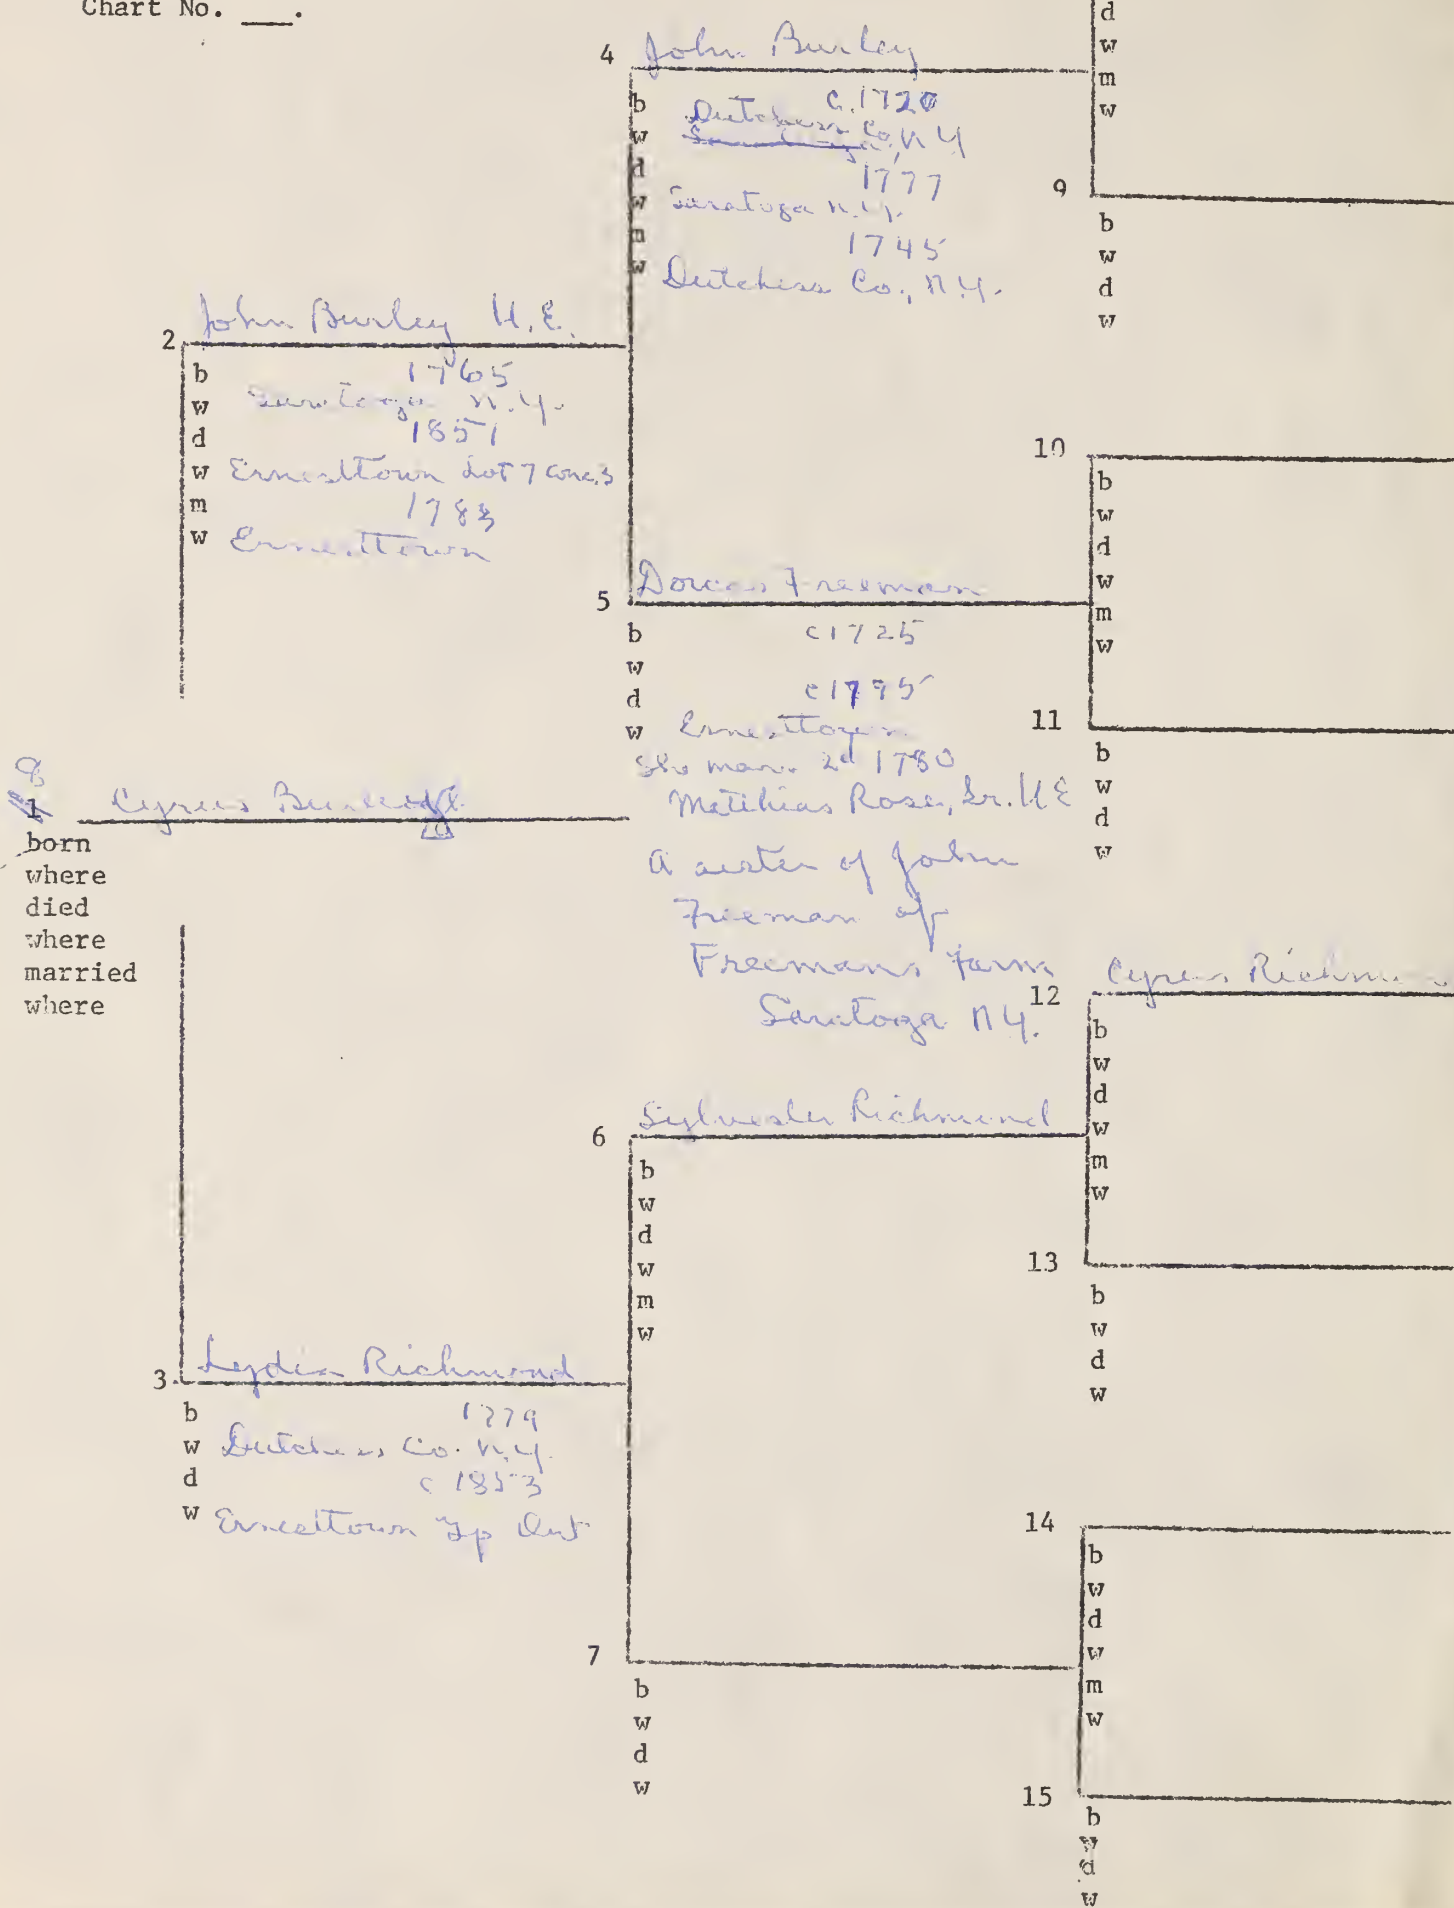

Best wishes,

Rose Honey

Wan day the Widow Percy and her grandson Michael Richardson started for market in Kingston, ridin' in the lumber wagon. 'Twas their intintion to stay at the Five Mile House for the evenin' and to go on to Market the mornin' afther. Well, when they druv intil the hotel yard, the ould lady says to Mishael, says she, 'Michael, Step intil the inn and ask if they's room for the night.'

Michael popped intil the inn at her biddin'. In a minit he comes out and says to his granny, 'There's room, granny.'

'No, no, Michael, we'll be movin' along. I've no wish to sto at the inn. Anyway, there's better accommodation beyond. I wouldn't be for stayin' here for a token. 'Twas annything. I saw az coffin with candles and beads on it forninst the shed. 'Twill go bad if we stay here. Drive on, Michael.'

They stayed the night in Waterloo, now called Cataragui, and, after attendin' the market and buyin' their needs, they started for home. When they reached the Five Mile House they drove in to water the horses. Micheal got out and removed the bridles so the animals could drink the better. Then, all of a sudden something scared them. They ^{shied from the trough} away in fright, cramping the wheels against the waggon box. In a moment the wagon had upset. A barrel of salt on the back of the load fell on the widow, kikhlin' her. 'Twas a proper token. That's what it was.
